

In times of crisis, education provides a sense of stability, structure and hope for the future.

Education teaches life-saving information and survival skills: protection against landmines, abuse, violence and disease.

Education provides an environment where children are safe.

Schools can provide protection, nutrition and health care.

Protective learning spaces shelter children from abduction, recruitment into fighting groups, exploitation and trafficking.

Education is protection.

In countries that have emerged from conflict or natural disasters, education restores civic confidence and can be one of the first dividends of peace. It signals prospects for a better future where children are given the opportunity to learn and develop to their full potential. Education is a fundamental human right that protects children from harm. This right is never more challenged, or more needed, than in times of crisis. To learn more, please visit:

www.educationandtransition.org.